This is “Acknowledgments”, article 2 from the book Beginning Human Relations (index.html) (v. 1.0).

This book is licensed under a Creative Commons by-nc-sa 3.0 (http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/3.0/) license. See the license for more details, but that basically means you can share this book as long as you credit the author (but see below), don't make money from it, and do make it available to everyone else under the same terms.

This content was accessible as of December 29, 2012, and it was downloaded then by Andy Schmitz (http://lardbucket.org) in an effort to preserve the availability of this book.

Normally, the author and publisher would be credited here. However, the publisher has asked for the customary Creative Commons attribution to the original publisher, authors, title, and book URI to be removed. Additionally, per the publisher's request, their name has been removed in some passages. More information is available on this project's attribution page (http://2012books.lardbucket.org/attribution.html?utm_source=header).

For more information on the source of this book, or why it is available for free, please see the project's home page (http://2012books.lardbucket.org/). You can browse or download additional books there.

Acknowledgments

I would like to thank and acknowledge Melissa Yu, project manager, for her constant encouragement, communication, and dedication to this project. Melissa is one of the best in the business, and I feel lucky to have worked with her on both Unnamed Publisher projects. She is what made me come back for more!

Also, thank you to Michael Boezi, whose enthusiasm for the Unnamed Publisher model is an inspiration to all, leading to a world full of free textbooks for students.

I would also like to acknowledge the behind-the-scenes people who worked on the technical aspects of this book. Those individuals are a key aspect to the success of the Unnamed Publisher model!

Thank you to the reviewers who took time to look at content and make suggestions. Their suggestions were imperative in the creation and improvement of this book:

Mary Rucker, Wright State University

Greg Watson, Arizona College

Laura Riolli, California State University Sacramento

Greg Richards, Spokane Community College